began to cry. Mrs. McDonald turned her hears work over to Alice McAtoon, a cous n of hers who lives with them, and who was four ery, a servant in J. B. Cornell's family and picking up the baby, rocked it to sleep. She laid it on the folding bed in her room and returned to the kitchen.

Alice has been in the habit of making up all the beds in the hease since she has been stopping with the McDonalds. When Mrs. McDonald relieved her from the kitchen she immediately went to the latter's room to tidy it up. Seeing the felding bed open, she shut it up and after "doing" the rest of the room, returned to the kitchen.

About 1 c'clock the girl turned to Mrs. MeDenaed and said?

and and said:
what's become of little Annie. I haven't seen her for some time?"

"Oh, she's sleeping in the felding bed," said
Mrs. McDonald.
"My God!" screamed the girl, "I shut the bed up haif an hour ago."
Both women rushed into the front room.
The bed was hastily pulled down. The baby was dead, in among the bed clothes. It had was dead, in among the bed crothes. It had been smothered.

Alice went almost crazy with grief. The police were notified, and an officer went to the house and took charge of the body. The girl was not arrested, but will not be allowed to leave the house until the Coroner has investigated the case. The McDoralds have three children still.

Thursday aron ing there was a lift of white

three chadren still.

Thursday evening there was a bit of white crape on the door knowed the tenement. The buby lay on a table in the partor, two burning candles at its feet, and a dozen neighbors sitting around the room in quiet.—N. Y. Sun.
